

Colic in Horses

Recently I was contacted by a friend of mine who asked me if I could help her horse that had been suffering from colic. It had been diagnosed with an 80% blockage and it had not passed any faeces for about 20 hours. It had been seen by the Vet and they had done all that they could possibly do and the only option they had left was surgery.

To cut a long story short, the horse was administered a combination of five different Schuessler tissue salts and had passed urine and faeces within 1½ hours of starting the treatment. The horse made a full recovery.

All of the horses that I have used this Colic Relief remedy for have recovered well. Generally it takes 30 minutes for gut sounds to start again and things continue to improve from there. You may prefer to call your Vet then administer the Tissue salts and hopefully by the time the Vet comes your horse will be ok. Unfortunately it can't help a twisted gut so if there is no improvement after 30 minutes then this is something to consider.

This remedy can be used in conjunction with any medications or drenches that your Vet gives your horse.

There are many causes for colic symptoms so please contact your Vet if you have any doubts at all about what you are dealing with. This remedy does not replace Veterinary care but so far has been very successful.

Treating the symptoms early will give your horse a better chance of recovery.
